Laidian Technology (“Laidian”) has partnered with Onething Technologies to use ThunderChain to connect online and offline applications. Laidian is one of the major Chinese startup companies offering mobile phone power bank sharing services. It has covered more than 280 cities in China and served over 100 million customers since it started operations in 2014.

Mr. Huang Yun, COO of Laidian Technology, commented, "The integration of our sharing services and blockchain technology helps us enhance customer experience and explore new business models. We are excited to partner with Onething Technologies as ThunderChain has demonstrated strong capabilities in increasing efficiency, improving security and building trust with end users."
