Mass entrepreneurship and innovation is a national strategy in China for economic transformation and development, in an effort to facilitate startups and innovation. The award selection of the “Outstanding Entrepreneurship and Innovation Projects” was first introduced in 2016, and is aimed to identify high-quality projects, promote mass entrepreneurship and innovation, and foster economic transformation and upgrading. This year, a large number of companies and research institutions applied for the award for achievements covering big data, blockchain, Artificial Intelligence, Internet of Things, smart cities and other frontier technologies. ThunderChain was awarded on the basis of its blockchain innovation and applications that can promote the development of real economy and smart society.
